PERSONAL CONSULTATION
Are mail order prescriptions a bargain? Local pharmacists, doing their professional job, provide not just a bottle of pills, but a therapeutic service for the patient. What may seem like a few friendly, courteous questions can actually reveal something that may save that patient's life. When patients have no face-to-face contact with their pharmacist, they lose the benefit they might derive from this interaction. Even a person who has been taking the same maintenance medication for years may require periodic inquiries by his or her pharmacist.
